UW Human Resources Policy Performance Management for Supervisors and Managers provides information regarding required goal setting during the annual performance review and mid-point conversation. Some career development opportunities, as well as steps taken to prepare for career opportunities, may be utilized as annual evaluation goals on the employee's performance evaluation. Additional counseling may be done informally by other than immediate supervisors, mentors, members of departmental specialized units, etc. Counseling should include inquiry regarding the employee's plans and preferences; review of the employee's areas of knowledge, skills, and abilities; and discussion of relevant training available. Counseling may include instruction in or discussion of steps that the employee should take to prepare for those career development opportunities. This may include writing skills, interviewing, study, and/or alterations in their focus or performance in their current assignment.
- B. Career development opportunities arise frequently. These opportunities include, but are not limited to the following:
1. Promotions;
  2. Training;
  3. Formal education;

  5. Collateral assignments;
  6. Alternative positions within the Department; and

- C. Opportunities for Department sanctioned training will be available to employees, either by placement of written materials in multiple accessible locations or electronically, or some combination thereof. Employees are encouraged to investigate other available training and submit training requests, as appropriate. Supervisors may submit written training requests for their employees at any time. Employees may submit written training requests via the chain of command. All employees are encouraged to utilize educational opportunities in pursuit of their career development. The career counseling portion of the annual evaluation affords supervisors an opportunity to discuss avenues that might facilitate individual growth and career development. The employee's supervisor and the Training Unit can assist the employee by locating educational programs that will assist the employee in pursuing his or her career opportunities. The Office of Talent Management offers a variety of courses on campus throughout the year that may be relevant to employees' career development.
